

ABSTRACT

Method of evaluating degradation of electrical signals is disclosed. The method involves visually comparing a visual representation of a reference signal generated by a test signal source, which can be made identical to an original signal, and a degraded 5 signal generated by another test signal source after passing through a video system.